Launching into Learning is a Tasmanian government initiative based on extensive research that highlights the importance of brain development and learning from Birth to five years of age.

75% of a child's brain develops during the first five years of life. What a child experiences during that first 5 years is vital to future health and development.

"Young children learn more during the first five years of life than at any other age."

Mille,I,Cable, C, Deveraux,J (2005) Developing Early Years Practice, p.84, Great Britain, The Open University.

Through all of our Early Programs we aim to support families in providing their children with a variety of rich learning experiences. Families are invited to participate in any programs that best suit their needs.

Our LiL program is in it's 14th year and we are seeing improved results in Early Years testing. Most evident in the families who attend LiL is 'confidence' and a 'sense of belonging' in the school environment. Our LiL children couldn't be better prepared for a smooth transition from home to school.
